The Loss and Discovery of
Avro Anson L7056

“Seventy-One Years” is a documentary about the discovery by three forestry engineers in October 2013 of a wartime Avro Anson trainer, presumed lost at sea earlier with its four-man crew on an navigation exercise out of RCAF Station Patricia Bay. An award-winning story told by one of the producers!

Robert Stitt trained at Hawker Siddeley Aviation in the UK. He moved to Canada to work in the aerial forest fire control industry and has published 20 works to date. He presides over a Vancouver Island flying club while restoring one of the Fleet Canuck trainers he learned on.
