RCAF Fortress Transports

168 Squadron

Enjoy a lively presentation about the remarkable story of an unknown unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force, No. 168 (Heavy Transport) Squadron based at Rockcliffe, Ontario during the Second World War. From 1943 to 1946, these aircraft ferried vital mail and other cargo to overseas troops in Europe.

Artist and historian Clarence Simonsen served with the Canadian Army Provost Corps in Cyprus as a UN peacekeeper. He later became a police officer while researching, collecting and repainting aircraft nose art with quite an expertise.
