

It is unfortunate for the tourists that the ship cruise lines sell a coastal voyage up the fog shrouded coast, feed them excessively, and drop them off in the tourist town of Skagway. Very few tourists venture beyond the noisy bars and the crowded sidewalks of Skagway to go up and over the nearby snow capped Chilkoot and White Passes to see and feel the Yukon. Hopefully Chris' book will help to correct this missed opportunity and lure people up the other path, into the Yukon.

Aviation Enthusiast

CLARK SEABORN of Calgary based Seaborn Consultants Ltd is much more than an aviation enthusiast, not only is he a licenced pilot but an avid supporter of the aviation history of Western Canada.

Seaborn and his associates have researched and restored several historic Canadian aircraft. The largest of which is the total rebuild to flying condition of CF-AAM a 1929 Fokker Super Universal, a massive project that took 17 years to complete. Upon the completion Clark Seaborn participated in a five-year tour of the Yukon and Western Canada as well as to the Experimental Aircraft Association Fly In at Oshkosh, Wisconsin.
